International Cooperation

CPMA contributes to the policy of international development cooperation by implementing projects aimed at ensuring peace, promoting economic growth and social stability in the world, reducing differences between countries and integrating partner countries into the world's economy. The year 1999 can be considered the beginning of CPMA's involvement in international development cooperation activities. Since 1999 until 2009, when Lithuania was a recipient of the European Union (EU) support, CPMA performed the functions of the administrator of the EU Twinning program in Lithuania. After Lithuania became an EU member state, CPMA continues its international development cooperation activities by transferring the European integration
